

Compare dock and lift brands by project fit

Compare EZ Dock, Candock, ShoreMaster and ShoreStation without treating brand as design approval.

Updated October 29, 2026

Choose the type of system before you choose a finish. A floating platform, a removable dock and a boat lift solve different problems. The manufacturer pages below were fetched on the same date. They show product families, not a neutral test of performance.

A useful shortlist

| Brand | What the fetched manufacturer page shows | Ask the local supplier | | --- | --- | --- | | EZ Dock | Modular floating dock systems and a dock design tool | What anchoring and shore connection fit this site? | | Candock | Modular floating dock systems | Which modules and connections suit the intended use? | | ShoreMaster | Docks, boat lifts and waterfront systems | Which dock and lift models are compatible with the site and boat? | | ShoreStation | Boat lift and waterfront product information | Which exact model, controls and service arrangements apply? |

This table does not rank durability, safety or value. No independent comparative test was used. Availability and support must be confirmed with a dealer in your market.

Compare the same scope

Give each supplier the same boat and site information. Request a layout with dimensions, a named product specification and a separate installation scope. Compare anchors, pilings, gangway, utilities, delivery and removal. A lower equipment price can omit work that another quote includes.

Ask for the warranty document that applies where you live. Identify exclusions for storm conditions, misuse, installation and corrosion. Ask who decides a claim and who pays for access or transport during a repair.

Try the daily use case

Discuss boarding with children, guests and people with reduced mobility. Ask how the surface behaves when wet, how the boat moves at the berth and how service staff reach the equipment. Request a visit to an installed system if available.

Brand familiarity is useful for parts and service discussions. It cannot replace the engineer's site review, permission to build or the installer's competence.
